Gov. Denote and Gen. Fremont reviewed the Twenty-Third and Twenty-Fourth Roginents at Camp Chase that morning. Their appearance and movements were highly satisfactory. These regiments go immediately into active service in Western Virginia, probably, with the Kanawba column. They are well-officered and well-drilled, and will make their mark.

The three mentlis' troops are on route from Virginia. The Fourtoenth Regiment, Col. Steedmen, passed through Columbus this afternoon, going to Toledo. After a brief furlough, two thirds of it will re-enlist for the war.

THE SEIZIRE OF STATE ARMS AT MAY LIELD.-Wo call the attention of the publi in general and of Gov. Magostin in particular rage demands the instant and grave attention of both the public and the Governor.

We take it for granted that the principal facts in the case are not open to dispute. That certain nrmed secessionists, a portion of them from the Confederate army, have seized illethem off in triumph to Tennessee, and that the arms thus seized and borne off are now, or were at the date of the latest possible intelligence from that region, distributed amongst the Confederate camps lying immediately bevond the Southern border of Kentucky, will nat, we presume, be disputed by any one. We helieve these are simple facts. They are no doubt incontestable. And there is reason to believe that Gov. Magostin is aware of this from information which he himself deems perfeetly credible. There is very good reason to

It will be seen from our correspondence that Senator Johnson has been more or less activo in this matter, ostensibly at least on the side of law and order, and we nll know that Senator Johnson, whose expansive solicitude for the able sobringer of "The Senator from Cairo." is Gov. Will the Governor respond to this stolen be carried back into our limits to remain at least until after the election? Will he deunderstanding with the depredators or bring it about in some other way, and, then, after the lepse of a suitable time or of no time at all, direct his facile organs to announce with n flourish that General or Colonel or Major Such-a-ono in the Confederate army politely informed His Excellency that the stolen arms were subject to his order, that His Excellency politoly ordered them back into Kentucky, that the order was politely submitted to, and that so ends another Union shinder?

We confess this seems to us the course His our epinion, his action in the case lies between this and nothing. We shall see.

ELECTIONS TO THE LEGISLATURE. - The day of election of the members of the Legislature is now very near at hand. We hope that the importance of the result of the action of the people on that day is properly estimeted. Certainly it cannot be overestimated.

In this canvass for the Legislature the sec sionists are playing a dishonest game. DESCRIPTION OF THE GREAT BATTLE AT BULL'S UN .- The New York Times of Tuesday contain the following description of the battle of the 21st which wes written by Mr. Raymond, who was an As I telegraphed you yesterday, the attack was

As I telegraphed you yesterday, the altack was made in three columns, two of which, however, wore meinly feints, intended to amuse and occupy the enemy, while the substantial work was done by the third. It has been known for a long lime that the range of hills which border the small swampy stream known as Bull's Run, has been very thoroughly and exten ively fortified by the rebals—that betteries had been planted at every available point, usually concealed in the woods and bushes which abound in that vicinity, and covering every way of approach to the region beyond. These are the advance defenses of Manassas Junction, which is somethree miles further lassas Junction, which is some three miles further of the life in arried others of a similar character would have on be overcome at every point where they could a erected. The utmost that military skill and igenuity could accomplish for the defence of this oint was done. Gen. McDowell was unwilling to make an attack directly in face of these hateres, as it would be of deubtful issue, and must eavitably result in a very exist. nevitably result in a very serious loss of life.

After an attack had been resolved upon, thereore, he endeavored to find some wey of turning he position. His first intention was to do this the Southern side—to throw a strong column to the place from that direction, while a feigned tack should be made in front. On Thursday, when the troops were advanced to Centreville was found that the roads on the south side of these positions were almost imprecticable—that they were narrow, crocked, and stony, end that it rould be elmost impossible to bring ap anough rtillery to be effective in the tima required This riginal plan was, therefore, abandoned, and Fri-the moda and point of attack.

On Saturday the troops were all brought closely up to Centrevilla, end ell needful preparations ware made for the attack which was inlended for the next day. Yesterday morulng, therefore, the army marched by two roads—Col. Richardson with his command taking the Southern, which leads to Bull's Run, and Gen. Tyler the Northern—running parallel to it at a distance of about a mile and a half. The movement commenced at about 3 o'clock. I got np a little before 4, and found the long line of troops sxtended far out on aither road. I took the road by which Col. Hunter with his command and Gen. McDowell and staff hed gone, and pushed on directly for the front. After going out about two miles Colonel standard the little that the standard the Hunter turned to the right, merching obliquely towards the Run, which he west to cross soma four miles higher up and then come down upon the intrenched positions of the enemy on the other side. Tyler went directly forward to engage the enemy in front and send reinforcements to Col. Hunter whenever it should be seen that he was engaged. I went out, as I heve already stated, upon the northern road. It is hilly, like all the surface of this section. After going out about three miles, you come to e point down which the road, leading through a forest, descends—then it proceeds by a succession of rising end falling knolls for a quarter of a mile, when it crosses a stone bridge and then ascends by a steady slope to the hights beyond. At tha top of that slope, the rebels had planted heavy batteries, and the woods below ware tilled with their troops and with concealed cannon. At the top of that slope, the rebels had planted heavy batteries, and the woods below ware tilled with their troops and with concealed cannon. We proceeded down the road to the first of the small knolls mentioned, when the whole column hilted. The 30-pounder Parrott gun, which has a longer range than any other in the army, was planted directly in the road. Capt. Ayres battery was stationed in the woods a little to the right. The First Ohio and Second New York Regiments were thrown into the woods in advance on the left. ANECDOTE OF WELLINGTON,—I remember a wooden-legged soldiar, whom I once saw defend the Duke of Wallington in a mob. But I must tell you the story. In the spring of 1827, I was spending an extra vacation in London, and thus I wilnessed the mobbing of this great man. I sup-pose you have thought that the Iron Puke had only successes and landations and honors in this world. Not so. Ila had not been the Iron Duka oally successes and laudations and bonors in this world. Not so. Ha had not been the Iron Dukas if he had not leen hardened by moral conflict as vell as hy warlika combat. At the time I was in Landon, the Duke had givan his voice for Catholic emancipation, consequently he had madn himself obnexious to the big oted raibbe. Sectation preachers preached against him day until night from pulpit, stand, and stump about treason, Popery, and the like, until the poor ignorant masses imagined that they must he bitted and brulled by a Pope and priesthood, and to the death, if Catholics ware treated like human because. Wellington had thrown his great influence in the scale of emancipition, consequently the mob delermined to reveige what they considered their wrongs on him. The animns of a m bis niere frequently a mistaks than a wickedness. One morning in February I noticed threatening crowds ner the Pall Mall gate, not far from the slatue of Achilles. This status was cast from rannons taken in the Iron Duke's various battles, and was dedicated "to Arthur, Duke of Wollington, by the Women of England." I determined to watch the Duke, and see what was as ing 10 be done. Punctual to the moment he rescended the sleps of Apsley Honae, his residence. His appearance was imposung. He was dedicated the was imposung. He was imposung in the head of the head of the hea led the steps of Ansley Honse, his residence. His appearance was imposing. He was at the head of the Cabinet, Premier of England, nd he was pur excellence the first man in ling-It was a drizzly morning. He were ablue frock coat, buttoned up to the chin, a military stock, and brown pantaloons. His falcon eye surveyed the excited groups about the Park gate, with a cort of pleasant contempt. The mob were either awed by his appearance and prestige, or they had not yet crewed their courage to the insulting point. The Duke passed on horseback, attack and by his faithful valet. Nobody molested him till he reached his office. There the mobilised him, but when he turned around and face I them, the hissing ceased. He then quietly entered his office. As I knew the hour he would leave Downing street to return to the Park, I was there in due season. The neighborhood of the Hore Guards probably deterred a good many of the excited fanatics from gathering about the rice, but numbers were gathered. The Duke, who was punctually itself, came on at the appointed moment, and mounted his horse, amid ground and hisses. After he passed the Horse Guards, the noise increased to shouts. When he issed Charing Cross, and entered Pall Mall, the hab began to the vimissiles and dirt. Near Pall Mall gate, there was a whirlpool of human beings, oddying round in strange, wild, and yet in a sort symmetrical confusion. I feared they would murder him there. As he approached the gate, a set deal spattered with mud and drt, the mobilist from pelled by some higher power than that of earth, made a lane for him to pass. For a moment he was very near them. For that moment, they seemed awed, and appeared to relont. But when he had entered the gate, their violence rose to fury. He dismounted with difficulty, placed is back at anist the raits of the status of Achilles, and calmly faced his futious assailants. I hall never forget that moment. Thoughts and facilings took a mastery of my nature then that have swayon me ever ince. Not one word did It was a drizzly morning. He were a blue frock facilings took a mastery of my nature then that have swayed me evar ince. Not one word did be utter. There was no shrinking—not even a cloud of apprehension upon that glorious face. Oh, how infinitely small and contemptible his asants looked! How great is man! How little

There was a lull in the storm of shouls, and wooden log, hustled his way to the side of the ke. This man sold apples and oranges by Hyde Park gate, and his hasket had bean upset by the mole. When he had reached the Iron Duke he stood by his side and imbound his any less and he was the truncated by the mole. and den leg and made a speech that inunediately ubdued the monsters. He begun:
"My curse on you for cowardly scoundrels! If ye have plack, come and fight me. Let there be two of us against you all. Bagorra come and kill uz both. This is your fair play! This is English astice! thousands against one. Think of Waterloo. But for him and uz, Bonay would have be ten ye. I we gotten my wooden leg for fight-log for ye, ye villius—and ye are goin to pay him by murderin him, ye bloody scoundrels! him by murderin' him, ye bloody acoundrels! then on, but come on at a time, not like cowsads and rufting as ye are, altogether—"

The speech was a mighty success. The mobwas ashamed and calmed and began to sneak away. Wellington gava a smile of recognition to the man who had saved his life, and ever afterwards he amply provided for him, as he did for many others, cu, of his own private fortune, it has own quiet, noiselass way.

The celebrated daguerreotypist, Niepce de Santi Victor, has at last discovered the secret of reproducing colors by the camera, and rendering hem permanent. He has subjected pictures taken I v his new method for several hours to the breat action of the solar rays, without producing w visible change in the tints. Blue, which has bitherto heen regarded as well nigh unattainable in the photograph, is now capisd vividly. The ame is especially true of yellow and green. The laris Monteur, which brings this intelligence, des not give the process.
